Tata Teleservices threatens to sue DoCoMo over its report services — its joint venture with the Tata Group.

DoCoMo had decided to exit Tata Teleservices in 2014 as its JV's performance was not up to the mark and had given Tata 90 days to find a buyer. With Tata failing to find a buyer for DoCoMo's stake in the JV, DoCoMo had exercised its right to seek a buyback option.

The Tata group, however, could not repay the amount as the Reserve Bank India (RBI) felt it would violate Foreign Exchange Management Act (Fema) norms. The Japanese firm initiated arbitration proceedings, which ruled in favour of DoCoMo and fined the Tata Group $1.17 billion.

The Financial Times said a person close to Tata said it was unlikely that DoCoMo would be able to seize assets belonging to Tata Steel and Tata Motors as they were listed companies owned mostly by outside investors. DoCoMo declined to comment on the report.

Ban on diesel cars is corporate death penalty: Toyota to NGT

New Delhi, July 28: Car manufacturer Toyota has moved the National Green Tribunal (NGT) arguing that the idea to ban diesel vehicles across the country was like a "corporate death penalty", as it impacts the existence of the company.

In its plea, the automobile company said ban on the registration of diesel vehicles manufactured by the applicant company is "unfair and unjust" as it was complying with all the laws and any restriction would severely impact its sales and the livelihood of thousands of people engaged in the automobile sector.
